Alternative Teacher Certification Program

The Alternative Teacher Certification Program is designed to prepare individuals to teach in severe shortage areas and provides an intensive course of study in educational foundations, pedagogy, and methodology, followed by a year-long internship during which students are hired and paid as first-year teachers. Specifically, students enroll in a web-based course in May, then a full-time schedule of courses during the eight-week summer session. After successfully completing the summer coursework, students complete an internship during which they are hired as full-time teachers for the entire academic year. The program culminates in a two-week comprehensive program assessment course that students take in the summer following their internship. The 2003 program is limited to students seeking secondary teaching certificates in one of following six subject-matter areas: math, science, foreign language, family and consumer science, business education, and technology education.

Candidates for this program must meet admission requirements that differ somewhat from other post-baccalaureate certification programs. Prerequisites include having completed a bachelor's degree (GPA 2.65 or higher on a 4.0 scale) and a major or minor in the intended area of certification, having been employed for a period of at least five years in an area requiring application of the individual's education, having passed the Illinois Basic Skills test and applicable subject-matter test, and having secured a commitment from a school district to be hired (and paid as a full-time teacher) for the internship. Interested students should contact the Coordinator of Web-Based and Alternative Teacher Certification Programs for specific requirements and additional program details.
